Lenbrook

September 28, 2012

Art Show Unveils Artistic Talent at Lenbrook

Oils. Water colors. Ceramics. China painting. Photography. Quilts. Wood working. Sounds like the wide range of art you'd find at an art show in Atlanta's famous Piedmont Park.

Artist Helen Means with her granddaughter.

This fall Lenbrook's 400 residents got to enjoy all of these artistic talents and more by 33 of their own resident artists during a 3-day show produced in Lenbrook's event center.

"We wanted to honor and showcase the expanse of talent that's right here in Lenbrook," said Cecile Hooks, organizer of this year's show and an accomplished oil painter herself. "One of our artists, Peg Gary, had refinished a wooden table and painted it with beautiful horses and dogs," she said.

Artist and Lenbrook show coordinator Cecile Hooks.

Two more of the participating Lenbrook residents, Emily Grigsby and Helen Means, have had their works featured in U.S. and European art shows and tour of homes.

A committee of nine volunteers, formed in early spring, orchestrated and beautifully executed Lenbrook's art show that began with a cocktail reception the first night. "Lenbrook has produced an Art Show four times in the last 10 years" Cecile explained, "and now is looking forward to the one in 2014."